Starting sporting dope with verse

Is quite the proper caper;
It never takes much brains to write,
And helps fill up the paper.

Frank Chance started for home yesterday to save part of his oranges not damaged by frost. Frank's real job will be saving some of the lemons on the Yankee payroll.

Making fights one day and denying them the next is becoming a habit. The mayor of Kenosha today said there was no chance for a Brown-McGoorty fight in his town. He said residents would appeal to the governor if a permit was granted.

Before leaving for Kansas City, Joe Tinker of the Reds said a Cincinnati contract had been mailed to Mordecai Brown. Tinker is going to Kansas City in an effort to persuade John Kling to return to baseball under the Cincinnati banner. John says nix, but remember what happened to Chance when he heard the jingling coin.

Jimmy Johnston, outfielder, secured from Birmingham, Ala., by the White Sox, sent in his signed contract yesterday. Johnston batted .296 in the Southern League and swiped 86 bases.

Joe Birmingham, manager of the Naps, denied he would trade Larry Lajoie and Terry Turner, and declared both would be regulars on the Cleveland infield next season. Lajoie is dissatisfied, and Birmingham may be spreading this story around to boost his value in the trading line. There was a trade rumored by which the two Naps were to come to the White Sox for Harry Lord and Rollie Zeider. The chances are that if Lajoie is allowed to leave Cleveland he will go to New York, as the American league is bending every effort to strengthen the Yanks.

Two moving picture firms are dickering with Frank Chance. They want pictures of Frank nursing the oranges on his California farm.

Koji Yamada, the Jap billiardist, made a great rally in the final block of his 18.2 match with Geo. Slosson, but was unable to pull down the big lead the New Yorker had secured in four previous nights. Yamada ran 722 to Slosson's 400 last night. Final score, Slosson, 2,000; Yamada, 1,920.

SAVE THE PIECES

Save the small ends of candles. They smooth boiled starch when added while cooking.

Save the water in which unsalted rice has been boiled. It makes the best starch for lingerie waists.

Save the paraffin off tops of jelly and jams as the latter are used. Wash it all up, melt and put away for next season.

Save the pieces of lemon and orange peel. Dry and powder for flavoring or cut into shreds and boil in a white sirup.

Save the pieces of cold potato and make a salad out of them.
